

CYBER SECURITY AND INDIAN SOCIETY

Concept, Function & Betterment

Seminar abstract

Internet is now not only a source of information but has also established itself as a medium through which we advertise and sell our products in various forms, communicate with our customers and retailers, and conduct financial transactions. Internet provides lot of benefits and gives us opportunity to advertise our business all over the world in very less time with minimal charge and less human efforts. The Internet was never built to track and trace user's behavior. The Internet was originally created to connect autonomous computers for resource sharing and to provide a common platform to the community of researchers. As internet provides huge number of benefits on one hand and on the other hand it provides equal opportunities for cyber terrorists and hackers. Cyber security is a complex issue that affects many disciplines and calls for multi-pronged, multi-level initiatives and responses. Though we are actively fighting and better performing various frameworks or techniques to protect our networks and information but all of them provide protection only for short term. However, better security understanding and proper strategy can help us protect intellectual property and trade secrets and reduce financial and reputational loss. Central, state and local governments keep large amount of data and confidential records online in digital form, which becomes a primary target of cyber-attacks, Most of the time governments face difficulties due to lack of proper infrastructure awareness and adequate funds. It is important for government bodies to provide reliable service to the society and protect confidential information. In this seminar all those points will be discussed in society.
