

Q1
Ans

Price ceiling is a situation when the price charged is more than or less than the equilibrium price determined by market forces of demand and supply.

It has been found higher price ceilings are ineffective. It is regulated by the government or group-imposed price control. Gov. use price ceilings to protect consumers rights and product that commodities prohibitively expensive.