

A fuel cell is an electrochemical cell that converts the chemical energy of a fuel cell and an oxidizing agent into electricity through a pair of redox reactions. Fuel cells are different from most batteries as requiring a continuous source of a fuel & oxygen to sustain the chemical reaction, whereas in a battery the chemical energy usually comes from metals & their ions or oxides.