

3.2

The principle of MHD power generation is very simple and is based on Faraday's Law of electromagnetic induction, which states that when a conductor and a magnetic field moves relative to each other, then voltages are induced in the conductor, which results in flow of current across the terminals.

Ocean Thermal Energy Conversion is a process that can produce electricity by using the temperature difference between the deep cold ocean water and warm tropical surface waters.