

8-8

Ans-8 A system analyst is typically confirmed to assigned on given system and will often work in conjunction with a business analyst. These roles, although having some overlap, are not the same. A business analyst will evaluate the business need and identify the appropriate solution.

* Communication

The analyst needs to be a very good communication to understand and communicate to their user groups as well as to the technical specialists.

* Foresightedness and vision :-

The analyst must have foresight and vision, so that they can factor in the future requirement of the users even if they have not factored that in the design.

* Selling :-

The analyst needs to have flair to sell these ideas and solutions to the users.

* Patient and rationality

The analyst needs to be patient and rational so that he/she do not rush to a solution.

* Sound temperature

The analyst needs to remain calm in the face of adverse situation.