

Ans. Information management concerns managing organizations' information resources to improve the performance of the organization, whereas Knowledge Management concerns the processes of creating, acquiring, capturing, sharing and using knowledge to enable learning in organizations.