

structure mining can be used to discover the link structure of hyperlinks. The purpose of structure mining is to produce a structural summary of website and similar web page.

Spatial mining

1. Spatial data mining is the application of data mining to spatial models.
2. In spatial data mining, analysts use geographical or spatial information to produce business intelligence or other results.
3. Challenges involved in spatial data mining include identifying patterns or finding objects that are relevant to the research project.

5) Telecommunication is a data warehouse is used in this sector for product promotions, sales decisions and to make distribution decisions.

Webmining is

They are 3 type of web mining

a) Web content mining Web content mining can be used for mining can be used for mining of useful data, information and knowledge from web page content. Web content mining performs scanning and mining of the image and graphics of web pages according to the content of the input (query) by displaying the list in search engine.

b) Web usage mining Web mining is used for mining the web log records and helps to discover the user access patterns of web pages.

c) Structure mining is