

Client Server Architecture

Client Server Architecture is a Computing model in which the server delivers and manage most of the hosts resource and services to be consumed by the client.

This type of architecture has one or more client computers connected to a central server over a network or internet connection.

