

② A point of sale promotion is a promotion that is placed at the checkout counter. They are intended to draw the customer's attention to new products which may be on special offer and are also used to promote special events.

Free standing display units are designed to attract the attention of customers and promote key retail products or managers.

They are often placed strategically within the customer journey and utilise bright colours and graphic usually to stand out and encourage shoppers to buy.