

Q6 e(ii) Paging is implemented by breaking up an address into a page offset number. Because each bit position represents a power of 2, splitting an address between bits result in a page size that is a power of 2.

That's why every page number always in the form of 2^k .