

Section - 1

Ans-2 Organisation is the backbone of management because without an efficient organisation no management can perform its functions smoothly. In the management process this organisation stands as a second state which tries to combine various activities in a business to accomplish pre-determined goals.

It is the structural framework of duties and responsibilities required of personnel in performing various functions with a view to achieve business goals.

In other words, organisation is simply people working together for a common goal. It is a group of people assembling or congregating at one place and contributes their efforts to achieve a common goal.

* Positive and Negative motivation :-

Positive and negative motivation
Positive motivation is the type of motivation a person feels when he expects a certain rewards. An example of positive motivation is when a father tells his son, "if you studied well and got high grades. I will buy you the new play station."

Negative motivation is the type of feeling a person gets when he ~~express~~ expects punishment. An example of negative motivation could be telling your child "if you didn't study i wont let you ~~trav~~ travel this summer."
