

Q.3 → Explain Globalization and its impact on environment?

Ans: Globalization:- Globalisation is the process of interaction and integration among people, companies and governments worldwide. Globalisation is the process of interaction and integration among economist takes to popular defined economic globalisation or the opening and deregulation.

Impact on environment:- Technological developments are the main force behind the globalization of the world economy. Just because of technology, the global markets have come closer to each other and made the world a smaller and connected market.

Following points describe the impact on globalization

- 1) Information and communication technology
- 2) Transport technology
- 3) Information and communication technology:- A complete transformation can be seen in life style of the people due to advancement in information technology and communication. be it their homes, offices, education or entertainment. The digital technology and internet have greatly influenced information technology and communication in the past few years. The world wide web (www) refers to a set of network of files which can be accessed from anywhere with the help of internet.

4) Transport technology:- The advancement of technology in the fields of automobiles has a big hand in promoting globalization. In the past century, industrialization has revolutionized the transportation by the invention of the steam engine or well as combustion engine. After that, there was no looking back in the field of transportation as people started moving with all the possible modes such as air, land, and water.