

Section - 4

Q.1 Explain the different type of sampling with relevant examples

Ans: Sampling - Sampling is a process in which the fixed numbers of observations are taken randomly from a larger population.

According to Davis "In the social science, it is not possible to collect data from every respondent relevant to our study but only from some fractional part is called sampling."

